THE NEW TRIER experience begins as each student emerges from the common denominator of sleep and plunges into the flow of the new day. Aided by the familiarity of the morning routine, he revitalizes and regains energy for entry into an academic environment. From numerous points in the community, the student population converges to form the working student body. New Trier, rich in educational opportunities, awaits the arrival of each individual.

NEW TRIER'S VARIETY of learning opportunities stimulates intellectual, social, and artistic creativity. Making his own decisions, the student develops a distinctive style of education. He explores beyond the required curriculum and discovers a multi-dimensional world of learning.

From the start of freshman year, each student's knowledge grows in a geometric progression with the choices made. A heightened sense of responsibility and an increasing appetite for knowledge result as the student cultivates his educational individuality.

HELPING TO BALANCE New Trier's academic emphasis, free periods allow time for the students to pursue individual interests and needs that arise from day to day. Engrossed in last minute studying, casual socializing, and welcome relaxation, the unstructured minutes slip by. The interactions and experiences during unassigned time further enhance the individual's perception of student life, completing the educational process.

and revels in the pleasures of the weekend

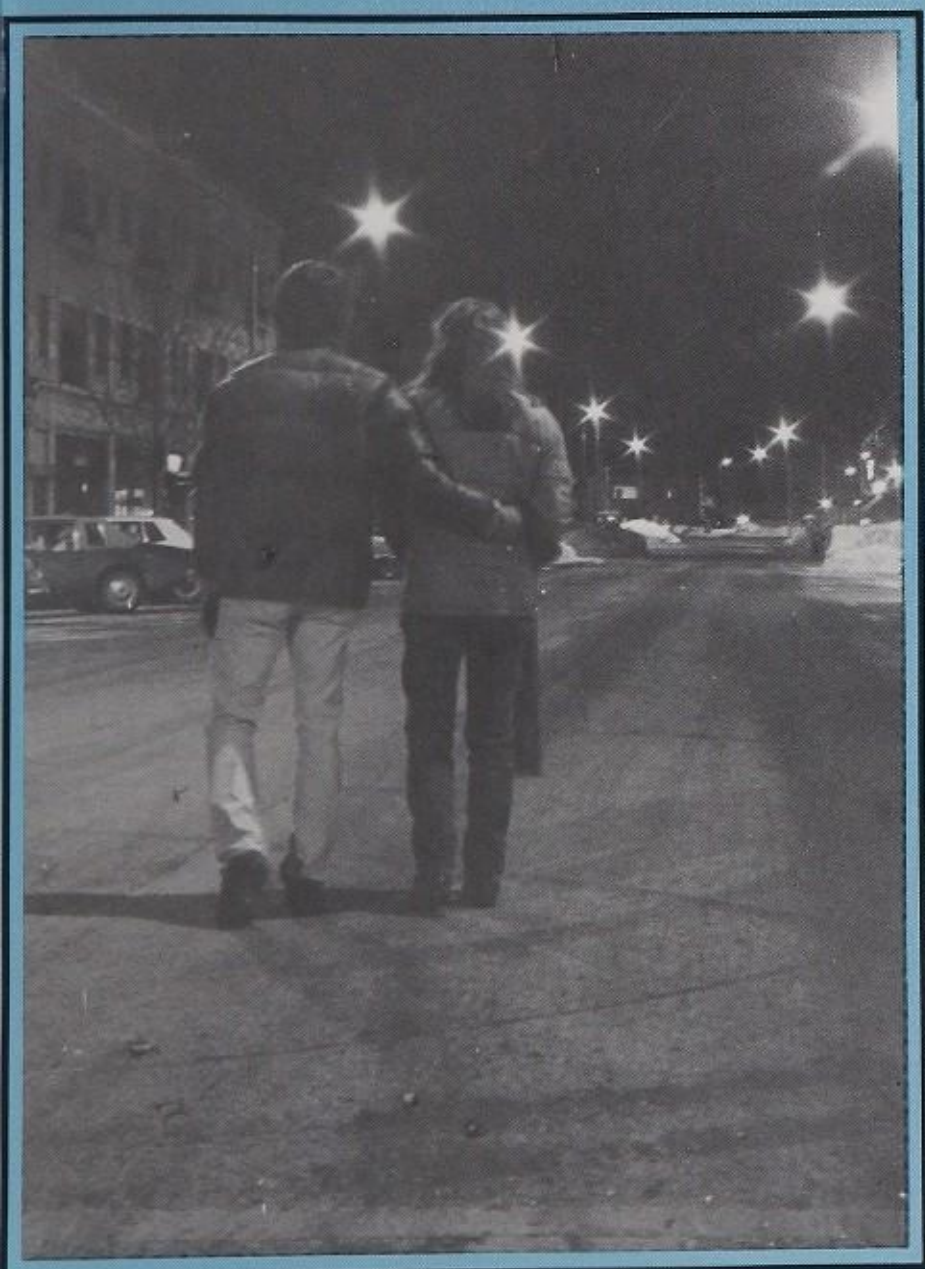

FROM THE SWIFT current of the academic week, the weekend surfaces to provide refuge for the submerged student. Now able to catch his breath, he plunges into the absorbing diversions of the weekend. In this brief period of relaxation, the student reacquaints himself with community, family, and friends. He revels in late night adventures, late morning sleep, and late afternoon lounging. Inevitably, the student loses his grip on the receding weekend and is swept back into the mainstream of the New Trier curriculum.

CONCENTRATING ON COMMUNITY and school service, Tri-ship had what Keith Boyd called "an extremely successful year." The 1978-79 club was characterized by expansion as a record number of people participated in its programs.

Tri-ship continued its annual projects with increased success. Pride Inside, a program designed to involve students in the upkeep of the school, was revived with increased emphasis and effectiveness. The Freshman helper program, with the goal of helping others enjoy the New Trier community, was expanded to help introduce freshmen to the school. After polling the student opinion, Tri-ship hosted the first homecoming dance in 12 years. The dance featured the band "Copperhead," and netted $500. Tri-ship continued its fund-raising efforts and sold a record 2800 trees during the annual Christmas tree sale.

With the help of second year sponsor Terrence Barton, Tri-ship reached all social and financial goals. For the 53rd consecutive year, the club geared its programs towards the principles which gave the organization its name. The fellowship department of Tri-ship sponsored two charity drives, and N-club displayed Tri-ship's sportsmanship. Usher Corps reflected the club's citizenship by providing service to all New Trier visitors. With an increase in involvement, Tri-ship was able to efficiently execute its many diversified programs.

CAMOUFLAGING HALLWAYS with publicity posters, sending P.A. announcements through advisor rooms, motivating advisory representatives, these were the means by which Girls' club successfully sparked interest in its organization. Guided by President Rachel Varley, the club enriched its calendar of events in an effort to encourage participation. The enthusiastic board members provided entertainment and enjoyment as they worked towards their ultimate goal: providing girls' scholarships.

Innovations in the standard Girls' club schedule spurred intrigue and interest among the student body. "Friendly Week" was rescheduled to an early October date and proved to be an inspiring introduction to the year. Seven thousand "friendly grams" were distributed throughout advisories setting high standards for large-scale endeavors that were to follow. Replacing the pumpkin sale of previous years, a new series of fall fund-raisers further extended participation. The first annual candy sale added Girls' club's cordial flavor to New Trier's fall routine. A new major project, the frisbee sale, sent profits soaring past predicted heights.

Girls' club maintained its wave of success by continuing traditionally profitable projects. The freshman - senior hag party, "A Day at the Circus," was an entertaining welcome for incoming club members. Freshmen helpers warranted their title by providing a liason between freshmen and the awaiting opportunities New Trier offers. Expanded to include the entire district, the canned food drive challenged even the most ambitious advisories as they worked towards the final goal of 30,000 cans; this effort received more widespread support than any other event in the 78-79 schoolyear. Matching the can drive's success, the spring magazine drive produced great results as Girls' club spread its influence beyond the doors of New Trier and into the homes of the surrounding communities. Girls' club put its members into the spotlight in the spring fashion show and provided them with a special evening at the Daddy daughter dinner dance; both added further to the scholarship treasury. With the impressive gains resulting from widespread participation, Girls' club again proved itself to be one of New Trier's most successful and useful organizations.

Above: Backed by a full calendar, Girls' club looks forward to a successful year. Top right: During a weekend football game, Alisa Dewys and a thirsty fan trade friendly service and satisfaction over the counter. Right: Ellen Clark and Maggie McCook clown around between performances at "A Day at the Circus." FOR MANY CHILDREN of the township, Saturday mornings meant fun-filled lessons and discoveries in swimming and gymnastics. These children were taught by dedicated, capable New Trier students. Guard and Gymkana volunteers, timers, matmaids, and statisticians made up Sports service, an organization comprised of students who shared a common interest — a desire to help their community and New Trier's athletic department. Members of Sports service gained a sense of responsibility and leadership as a result of the time they volunteered each week.

On Saturday mornings, Gymkana members taught youngsters of the community various aspects of gymnastics. Guard lent its services to Boy scouts, Girl scouts, and the community by offering swimming and lifesaving lessons and supervised free swims. The aid given by matmaids, statisticians, and timers in scoring and clocking various events was an integral part of New Trier athletic events. Sports service formed a valuable link between New Trier and the community.

ENTERING NEW TRIER, the freshman is overwhelmed by the multitude of dimensions that characterize high school. The small club provides a familiar atmosphere in which the new student can develop a niche of friends through an enjoyable activity. sophomore year, the student's involvement has grown into active participation. As a mainstay of the organization, the junior's identity is closely tied to the club and its members. Senior year, the once-frightened freshman has progressed into a leader of the organization. New Trier's numerous clubs form an integral part of the excellence of the school, for clubs foster leadership, experience, and friendship.

Those clubs that capitalize on New Trier brain power generated renewed interest this year. Math club supplied mind-bending problems from past National math exams and specialized worksheets to prepare aspiring Euclids for interscholastic competition. Once again, New Trier emerged as a national forerunner in the math team circuit. Bridge club took a different approach, focusing primarily on informal free-play to sharpen their wits for the State bridge tournament. Chess club sponsored interclub scrimmages as well as interscholastic competition. For those interested in electronic wizardry, computer club got off the ground just this year. Astronomy club entered another stellar effort as they gazed into the complexities of the universe. The Forensics organization continued to instruct New Trier speakers in extemporaneous speaking and orating, while its offshoot, DANTE, provided instruction in dramatic events such as duet acting and comedy.

With an emphasis on the outdoors, Hosteling club took advantage of the opportunities in Illinois and Wisconsin, as it ventured into many different types of excursions. Biology club extended beyond the limits of the classroom through trips to the Botanic Gardens and the Indiana dunes. By contributing an environmental computer to Project future: 2001, Biology club gave students a look into global energy usage. Because of the growing interest in Nordic skiing, the Cross country skiing club was established, giving students the chance to ski various courses in the area. The newly formed Frisbee club sponsored exhibitions of new techniques to enhance the skill of its members.

Struggling students received valuable instruction from their civic-minded peers with the coordination of Student tutoring club. While the tutee received help in his problem area, the tutor profitted from the review of basic concepts.

The newly formed Minority students association dedicated itself to improving relations among all minorities at New Trier. They, along with other organizations, brought activist Jesse Jackson to speak to the student body. The MSA Dance-A-Thon raised money for minority scholarships.

American field service continued to make foreign students feel at home in their new surroundings and at the same time gave N Trier students exposure to different cultures. Gathering together, exchanging students traded tales from distant countries and helped one another adjust to American life.

In building a large scale model railroad, members of the Model railroad club gained knowledge in electronics, technical drawing, and design.

Latin club gained regional publicity with its performance of an ancient Roman comedy, Plautus' 'The Haunted House,' at the Art Institute of Chicago's Pompeii exhibit. Continuing its support of the Lyric Opera, the club attended performances, toured backstage, and contributed $150 as a patron of the opera.

Although New Trier's myriad of clubs helped ease students into the cycle of high school, their major purpose was to provide enjoyment. After a tense day in the high-pressure environment of New Trier, clubs offered the student a chance to relax and unwind.

BUSINESS ORIENT-
ED opportunities at New Trier were not restricted to Deca alone. Other student organizations, such as Hero, Home economics related occupations, and Oea, Office education association, approached vocational education through the exploration of consumer and secretarial skills. Through occupational preparation and community involvement, Hero prepared its members for jobs and careers which require home economics knowledge and abilities. As part of a community service requirement, Hero members visited a nursing home to become informed about the problems of the elderly.

For students interested in office-related occupations, Oea provided an opportunity to concentrate on business skills such as typing, shorthand, and accounting. Members of Oea improved their skills through participation in Oea competitions and employment in an office job. Hero, Oea, and Deca reaffirm the fact that although New Trier incorporates a traditional academic program, the variety of educational opportunities is unlimited.

OPEN YOUR HEART TO DECA

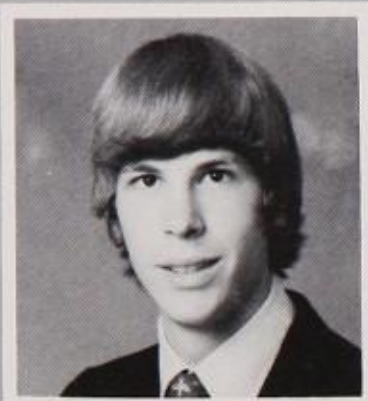

DECA

A RECENT NORTH central evaluation of New Trier revealed that over 20% of graduating seniors plan to be business majors in college. Until recently, exposure to business related skills was unavailable at the high school level. Because of the lack of depth in the work experience program, Deca, Distributive education clubs of America, was introduced to New Trier to provide a more well-rounded business curriculum. With over fifty members in the co-curricular class and club, Deca members studied retailing, marketing, and advertising skills. They successfully applied these skills in competition with other Deca representatives at area, state, and national levels. In addition, all students were employed in retail stores where they had the opportunity to use school learned skills. The club's members showed their involvement and enthusiasm throughout the year by raking leaves, wrapping Christmas gifts, selling Val-o-grams, and designing a merchandise plan for the Winnetka thrift shop.

INTRAMURALS, a supplement to interscholastic sports, provided diverse opportunities for those students who wished to participate in a less competitive and more informal athletic program. Placing an emphasis on team sports, IM offered both girls' and boys' tournaments in basketball, softball, volleyball, and soccer, as well as boys' competitions in flag football and floor hockey. Students were also able to participate in a wide range of individual events, notably ping pong and two-on-two basketball. Other events included coed tournaments in volleyball and tennis.

The IM board continued such traditional events as championship games with New Trier West and the All-star basketball game between the seniors and the faculty. Winter recreation nights and the IM rec room were also made available to the students. Because of the efforts of an involved board, Intramural events attracted more participants than ever, making this year's program a great success.

STUDENT COUNCIL underwent significant changes in the past year in order to more efficiently attend to the needs and desires of the student body. The organization combined its legislative and executive boards into a simpler "legislative assembly," and it completely changed its representative system from one chosen rep per advisory to one elected rep for every four advisories.

In addition to its regular duties of coordinating the lost and found and producing student ID cards, Student council assumed matters of greater consequence. The organization sponsored a voluntary work program, designed to monitor the cafeteria, the student lounge, and all study halls, and it debated the desirability of a mandatory work program. Student council also made an effort to educate the student body on the issues of voluntary desegregation and integration, by providing speakers and information to the students. A special event came in October when SC revived a past activity and sponsored the "Day - Before - November Fest," a school-wide Halloween party.

Tom Swarsen, in his last year as faculty sponsor of the organization, was particularly pleased with the achievements of this year's Student council. "In my eleven years as sponsor," he said, "this year's group has been one of the most creative and productive that I have had the pleasure to work with." In addition to increasing the amount of student awareness, the accomplishments of this year's Student council will hopefully set a trend for years to come.

EOC

IN A WORLD of multi-media saturation, cut-and-dried textbooks, and predigested information, the Educational opportunities committee provided a refreshing change of pace with its live presentations. The organization coordinated by Debbie Houghtlin, brought in such well-known figures as Abner Mikva, John Porter, and Roger Keats. As for cultural events, EOC presented such entertaining groups as the rock band "Contraband" and the traveling performing group "Aesop's greatest hits." Long range programs included Project Future: 2001, Law Week, and a seminar on alcoholism. Through EOC's efforts, New Trier students were able to take advantage of innovative learning alternatives.

"GIVE A LITTLE bit, get a lot" represents the unique relationships established in Social service. In a two-way learning process, New Trier students gave their time and understanding to those in need. The volunteers encountered diverse lifestyles and confronted many new and different situations. Working on a one-to-one basis, they participated in one of three main divisions: tutoring school children in the inner city and the local communities, caring for young hospital patients, and providing companionship for senior citizens in nursing homes. Although each group was distinct in its activities and environments, care and compassion were elements common to each.

Lasting friendships developed between each student and the person he worked with. The individuals grew to trust and respect their companions as they discovered within themselves an added sensitivity towards others. Everyone involved derived a strong sense of satisfaction and self-worth from the Social service program.

Board members provided leadership and guidance for each group while co-heads Cathy Love and Kate Mayer kept the organization running smoothly. The annual Rummage sale and the East/West Battle of the Bands concert raised funds necessary for the support of the program's various activities. Social service offered unique experiences as it benefited everyone who participated.

The great debate

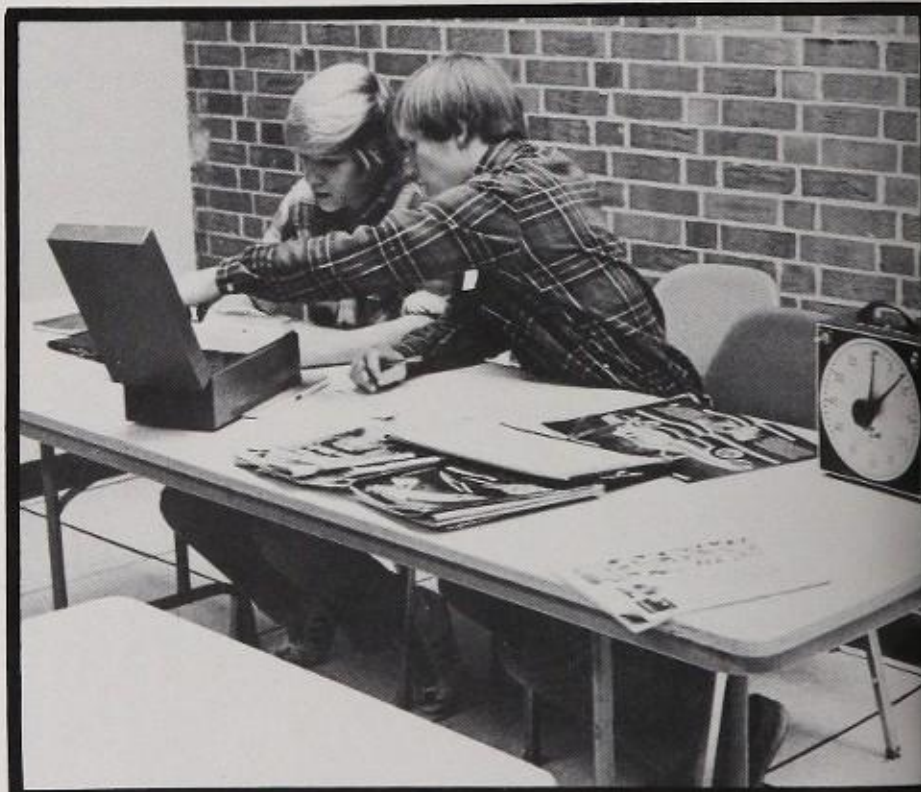

IT IS 5:30 A.M., Saturday morning. After a long night of researching newspapers and reorganizing notecards, the debater drags himself to New Trier East. There he joins a small group of people, huddled in the dark, waiting for a bus. Soon he will be en route to another debate tournament.

Even before their last season ended, the debaters began to prepare for this season's interscholastic competition. Many team members attended summer debate institutes at such universities as Redlands, Harvard, and Northwestern. During the school year, they continued their work, practicing their skills every eleventh period and researching at neighborhood libraries.

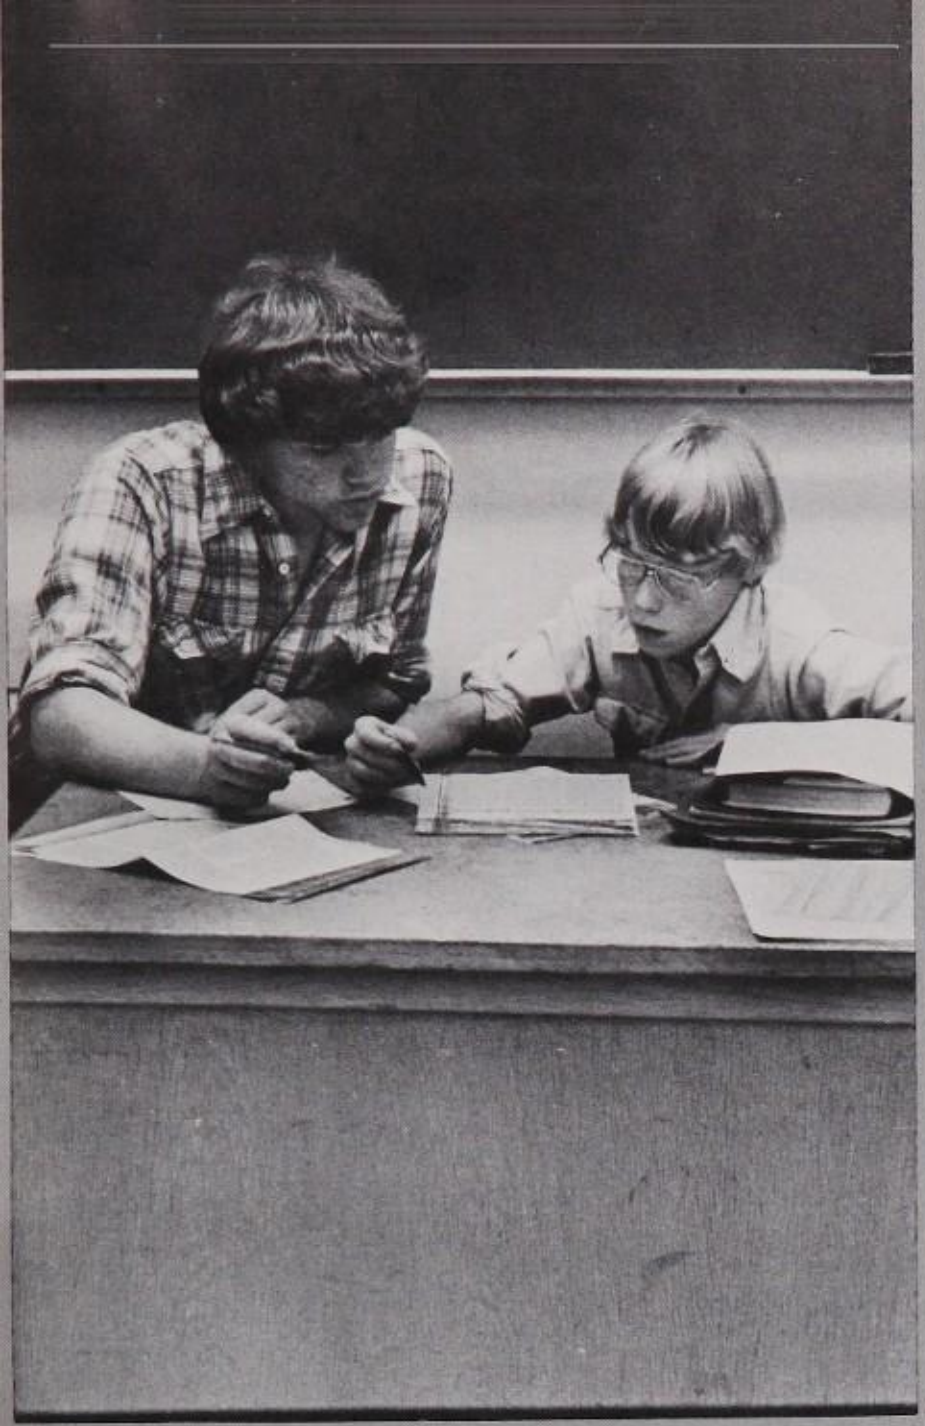

This year's debate topic questioned the United States' energy policy. Proposed reforms included increasing the use of coal, nuclear and solar power, de-regulation of oil and gas prices, and even the use of imaginative alternatives such as solar space satellites and wave power. The debaters thus gained extensive knowledge in an area of urgent and world-wide importance.

The 1978-79 team, led by coach Tom McClain and assisted by Martin Schnipper, was of exceptional quality. In all three divisions, Varsity, Junior varsity, and Novice, New Trier debaters took top team and individual awards.

"Y-E-L-L, Y-E-L-L EVERYBODY YELL, PEP CLUB!": shouts of enthusiasm filled the halls and bleachers of New Trier. With various programs planned for the year, Pep Club spread spirit throughout the school. The organization continued many traditional activities such as sponsoring the homecoming activities, selling refreshments at sporting events, and holding a candy cane sale before Christmas. The enthusiastic board expanded the extent of their programs by introducing Apple week, the Best bi-cep contest and a spring dance.

In accordance with Title IX, Pep club tried to make as many activities co-ed as possible. For the first time, boys had an opportunity to apply for board positions. President Helen Ryan commented on the move to include boys, "We have made a big effort to become co-ed; It has helped our organization to grow." In an effort to spread school spirit, Pep club 1978-79 not only expanded their membership but also the extent of their programs.

COMMUNICATIONS

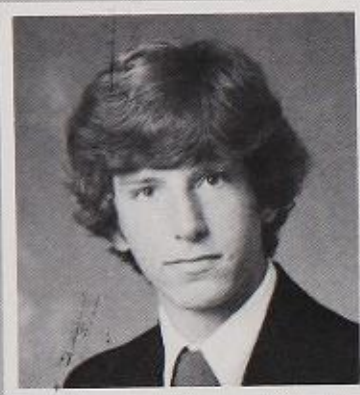

DAY AFTER DAY and night after night, the ECHOES staff toiled to meet demanding deadlines. In the basement of New Trier, typewriters clacked and pencils scratched as directories were typed and stories were written. The ECHOES photographers emerged from the darkroom just long enough to deliver their valuable prints and proof sheets. The clock showed 5:25, but the uncaptioned pictures erased any thoughts of departure from the minds of the hardworking staff.

With their imaginations as tools, the staff laboriously produced the framework for ECHOES '79. To avoid being buried beneath piles of pressing work, the staff devoted many hours per week to their ECHOES responsibilities. With the energy of Editor-in-chief Neale Williams and new faculty sponsor Jeanne Kelly, the high potential talents of the staff were channeled to keep ECHOES operations flowing at an efficient pace. Always wary of internal and mailing deadlines, the staff ceaselessly worked on.

Bit by bit and page by page the yearbook materialized. The editors, Junior assistants, and photographers bound together the pieces of the year. Twenty-two deadlines later, relief and exultation came to the intrepid ECHOES staff, for their creation, ECHOES '79, was complete.

PERTINENCE WAS THE watchword of the '78-'79 New Trier News. In an effort to defeat student apathy, a subject attacked in an early editorial, the staff concentrated on articles which directly affected the student body. The News expanded its coverage of events in the school and in the surrounding communities, and encouraged participation. The addition of "News Briefs" and the expansion of the paper to six pages provided space for a more complete coverage of New Trier's extra-curricular activities. Weekly features pages dealt with everything from restaurants to concerts, presenting the broad range of entertainment offered in the Chicago-Metropolitan area. These articles were designed to make the student more aware of his opportunities and to help him get involved.

Issues and answers

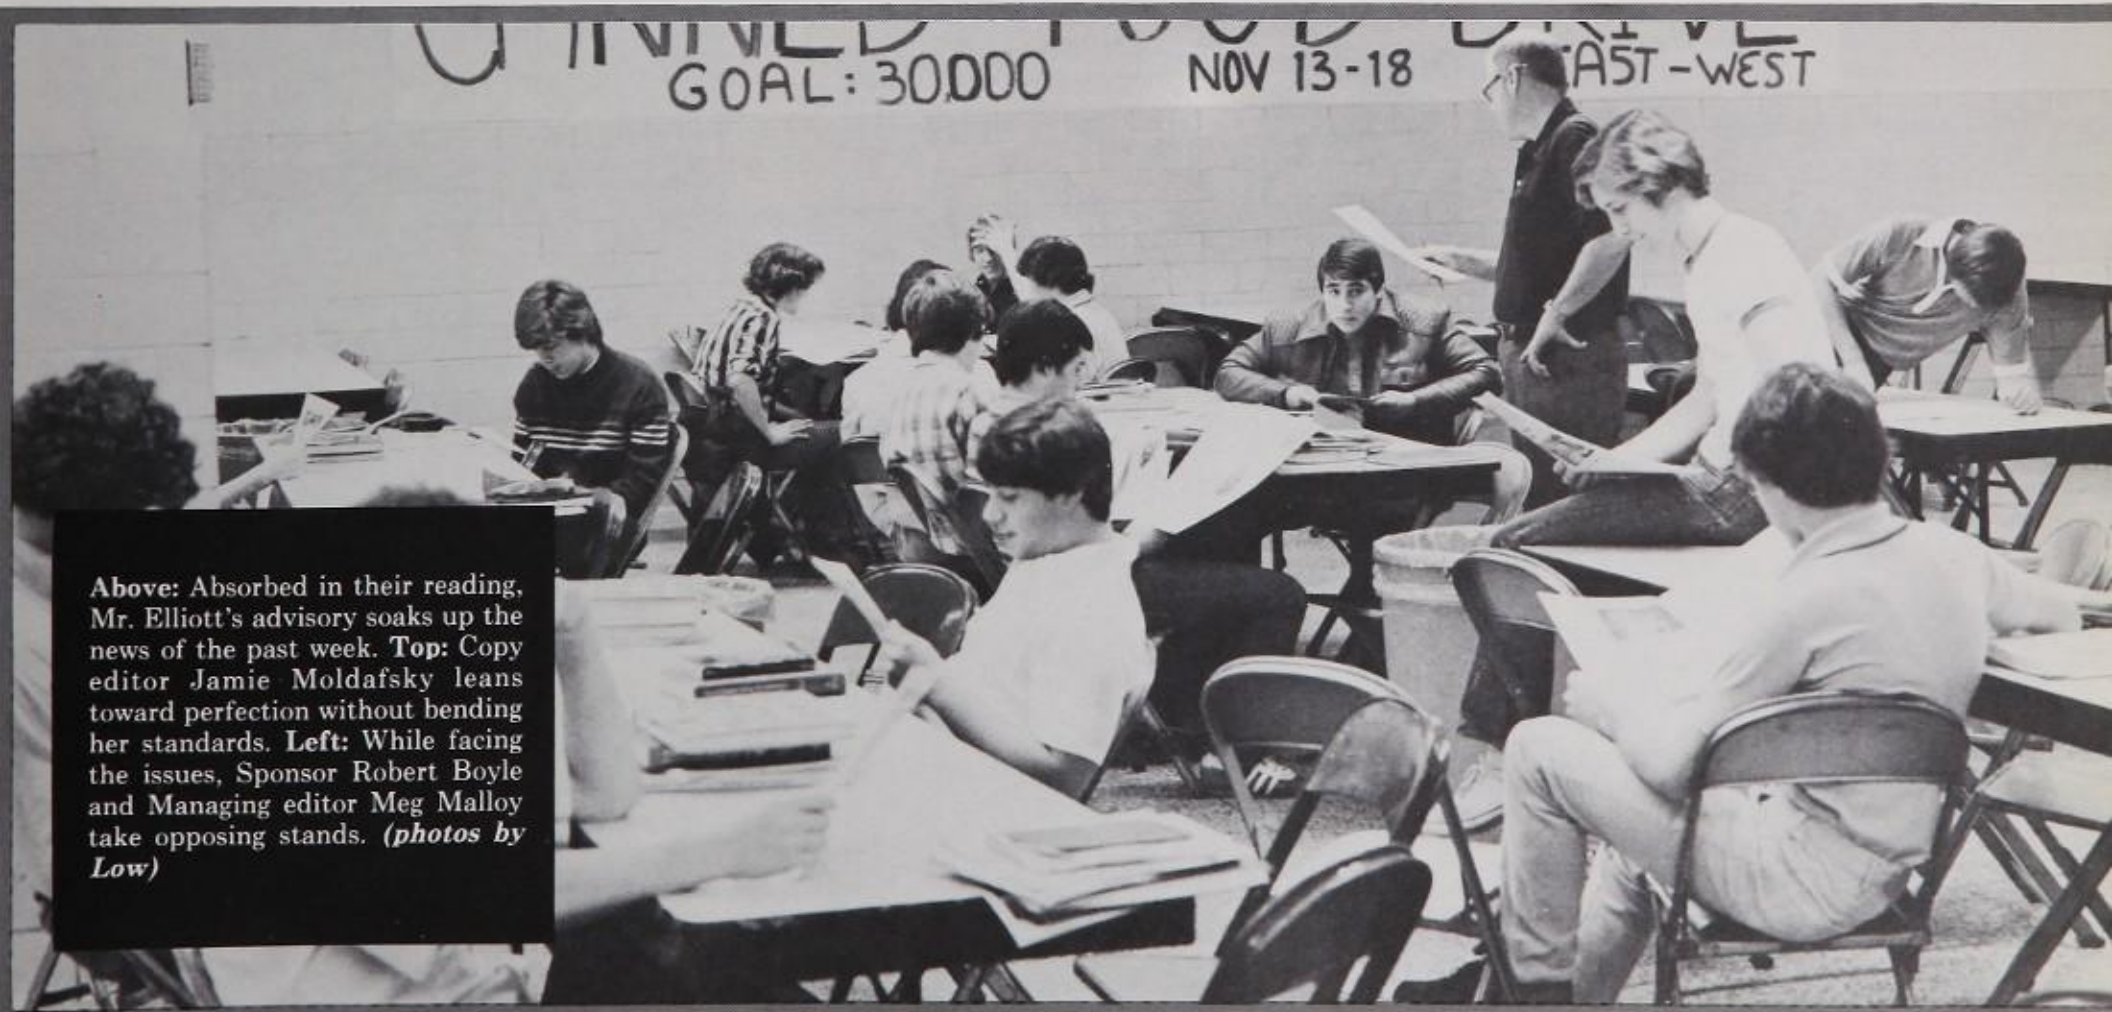

JOSH SAMOS
News Editor

Editor-in-chief Susie Hinds reflected the News' policies in her editorials. She not only presented problems but offered solutions. Though often controversial, her views were never ineffective. Letters to the editor and student submissions were welcomed and presented a broader viewpoint on many topics.

Each division of the staff produced first rate material that complied with the News' high journalistic standards. With the newly created position of Head Photographer, photographs were of a quality consistently higher than those of previous volumes. The News and Sports departments, headed by Josh Samos and Matt Love respectively, sparked the issues with new and interesting approaches to the weekly reporting. Feature stories provided a humorous edge for the paper and were complemented by an innovative use of layouts and graphics. Through hours of painstaking precision, the separate divisions of the News were successfully coordinated, resulting in a publication with an expanded scope of interest and influence.

THOUGH SURROUNDED BY computer tapes and chrome plated broadcasting equipment, the WNTH staff brought a feeling of warmth and spontaneity to a potentially impersonal FM station. This year, commercial free WNTH initiated its season with four thousand dollars worth of new equipment, its largest staff ever, and an impressive sign on — 100 hours of continuous broadcasting.

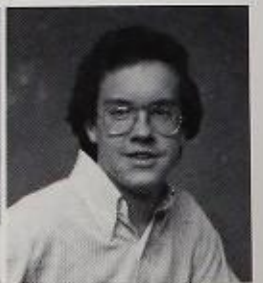

Always channeling its attention toward student preferences, WNTH limited the over-played top forty to Saturday mornings and based its programs around album oriented rock. An expansive jazz program, feature albums, live jams, a musically informative Friday night show, and the Christmas countdown of the 88 most popular albums were all part of an innovative format. Recognizing the importance of informative and educational programs, the station broadcast the Mikva vs. Porter debate and provided live coverage of election returns. In addition, WNTH expanded its activity coverage, bringing area listeners both an increased girls' athletic program and a more complete sports report as well. This year, WNTH became a more socially active organization. They sponsored a major dance and contributed a homecoming float. The station's expansion signified a major effort to keep in tune with the student body and meet its demands for a top notch station.

THE INTIMIDATING BUTTONS and flashing lights of an electronic world enveloped the diligent workers of ITV. A completely student run organization, ITV strove to develop creative and interesting programs. This year, ITV produced three alternating weekly shows that were entirely written and directed by students: a comedy, a magazine type news show, and a dramatic series. ITV continued to provide community services by broadcasting educational shows to elementary and junior high schools throughout the township. In addition, New Trier's television station provided an excellent learning experience — especially beneficial to those wishing to continue in the field of communications after graduation.

IF ALL THE artists could release their abounding energy into one anthology, it would be the most magnificent collection in the world. They would congregate: the novelists, the poets, the painters, the sculptors, and the photographers. Grey voids would colorfully be transformed into vibrant models of unprecedented brilliance.

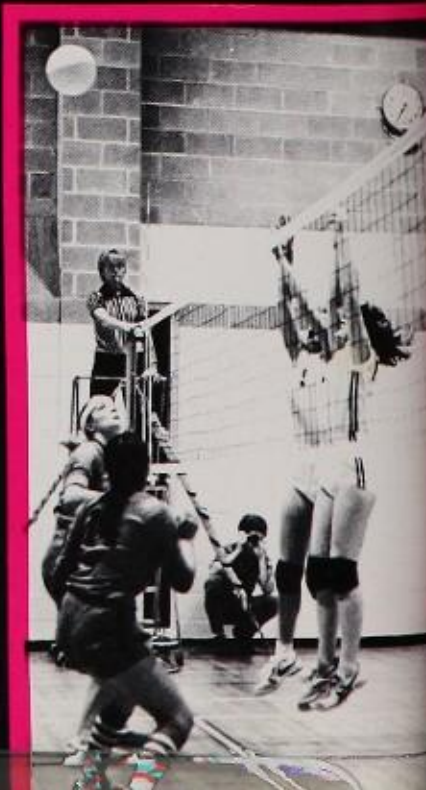

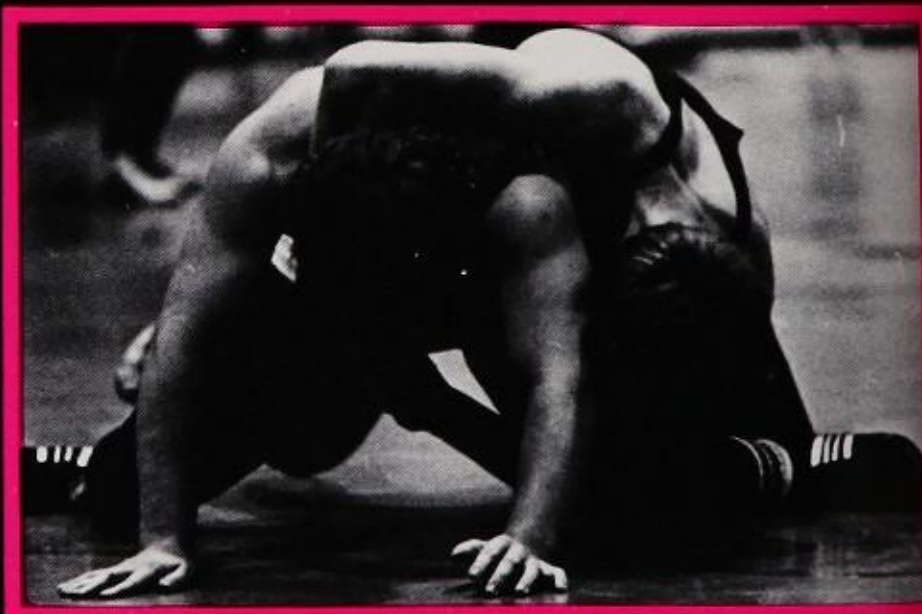

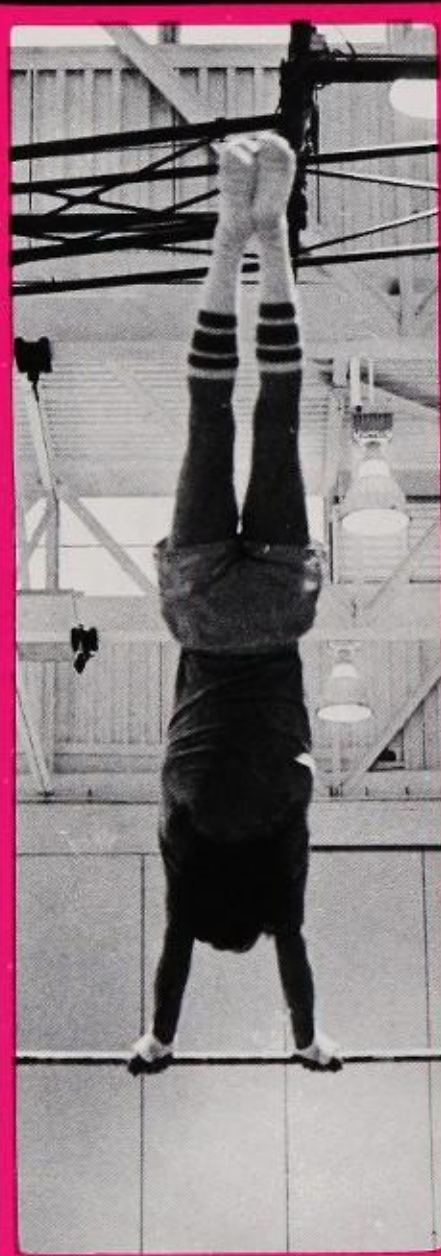

Inklings, New Trier's literary magazine, blended students' artistic talents into a unique compilation of poetry, prose, artwork, and photography. The staff chose outstanding submissions from a broad spectrum of student works. A new Creative writing workshop promoted contributions to Inklings while providing an informal atmosphere in which students could write and critique their endeavors. Editor-in-chief Margot Stone organized the ambitious board members who worked diligently to enhance the magazine with the innovative addition of color. Drawing together a year's collection of creativity, Inklings Day was marked by the distribution of Inklings 79 and was complemented by student music and dance presentations. With eloquent expertise, Inklings 79 bound the imaginative talents of New Trier into one unique anthology.

ATHLETICS

Fancy footwork

THE MOST HIGHLY skilled soccer team in Tony Schinto's New Trier coaching career recorded nine shutouts in their spectacular season. With an emphasis on technique and ball control, the Varsity booters compiled an overall record of thirteen wins and two losses. The combination of a high-scoring offense and a strong young defense produced a well-balanced and unified team.

After being named Chicago area Team of the week, an honor never before received by a New Trier team, the Varsity booters continued their standard of excellence throughout the year. John Moderwell, who set a new school record for the most points in one season, was named Athlete of the week — another first for the Indians. The season's highlights included a tie with top-ranked rival New Trier West, and upsets of such formidable teams as Deerfield and Forest View. Scoring over seventy goals and allowing only eleven goals against them, the Varsity squad entered the State tournament ranked among the top fifteen teams.

After a blazing playoff opening, the Indians earned a place in the sectional round-robin. Their participation in the tournament was cut short by a 1-0 loss to Evanston. Despite a brief appearance in the playoffs, the Varsity squad showed its championship caliber by placing second in the Central suburban league.

THE JV SOCCER

squad displayed excellence throughout the season, though hampered by an injury to star defenseman Nick Penney. Under the direction of Coach Earl Schabel, the Junior varsity worked with a versatile game plan and finished the season with a respectable 4-3-3 record.

Characterized by Coach Bob Ward as a team that "showed a lot of hustle and improvement," the Sophomore squad played impressively all season. Finishing with a 7-2-3 season record, the Sophomores' powerful offense and tough defense showed a great deal of promise for next year.

The Freshman A team geared their game around an outstanding offense. They presented a high level of play which Coach Tom Garden felt was not reflected in the team's 5-5-3 record. The Freshman B team was described by Coach John Cadwell as a hard-working team that played well together. Despite the disadvantages of such a large squad, the B team came out of the season with an impressive 6-4-2 record.

THE EARLY-MORNING DEW glistens as the golfer prepares to tee off. Surveying the field, she is ready to battle the hazards of the course. Throughout the ritual of practice, the golfer strives to fulfill her potential. She knows that daily training is essential to golfing success.

Rigorous discipline strengthened this year's developing team. Despite frequent rains in the beginning of the season, the Varsity squad excelled against league competitors Libertyville and Zion-Benton. Senior co-captains Jennifer Hosbein and Nancy Lee provided the inexperienced linksters with the necessary leadership. First-ranked Sarah Wheeler and sophomore Laura Cross were among the promising underclassmen. Coach Gerry Ryberg felt that the team gained experience and general knowledge that will greatly improve their quality of play next season.

AN EXACT COMBINATION of precision and power enables the golfer to play at the competitive level. This balance of strength and accuracy is the key to consistent golfing. During recent years, New Trier East golfers have brought expertise and finesse to the sport.

Early season rainstorms hampered practices and cancelled meets, but the undaunted Varsity squad continued to develop their skills. Coach Clint Carlstrom's young team recorded an 11-2 season, capturing first place in the Champaign Invitational and in the Central suburban league. The abundance of good players provided keen competition within the team. Senior Toby Thomas, noted for his smooth tempo, was chosen most valuable player. The exemplary play of J.C. Malles and Rich Synek also contributed to the team's success. Consistent low scores from underclassmen Mike DeBartolo and Jay Dempsey complemented the team's all-around performance.

The Freshman-sophomore team, though inexperienced in meet play, improved as the season progressed. Sophomores Art Ellis and Guy Lieberman led the team. Frosh-soph coach Earle Metzger believes that persistent practice could result in a Central suburban league powerhouse in the coming years.

THE VARSITY WATER

polo team made waves this season as they competed in the tough open division. Hard swimming and skillful ballhandling were their trademarks as they plunged into a full game schedule. The extension of the season developed the squad's teamwork and spirit. Seniors Josh Moss and Dave Hartong, and junior Steve Ashmore were integral parts of the Indian offense as well as some of the highest scorers in the league. The Varsity's record of 6-7 reflected the age of the young water polo program and the consequences of limited pool time. Turning in a fine 8-3 record, the Junior varsity will be a promising source for future players. Coach Bill Wolff commented on this season: "We set out to play 500% ball and have some fun learning the game. We did, and we are pleased with that."

Wolff's pack

Once again, water polo was not considered a sport, only a club, and therefore received no funds. The volunteer coaching of Bill Wolff was greatly appreciated by all the players. The time and effort he invested in this year's team will undoubtedly pay dividends for the future New Trier squads.

STATE CHAMPION: The highest honor a high school team can receive; the ultimate goal of every athlete. For the 1979 Fencing team, the dream of a state title became a reality as they returned from Champaign with the first place trophy. In the Epee division, senior Roger Cleland duelled to a personal first place victory while teammate Arthur Bebak took fourth place. In Foil, senior Mark Leverntz and underclassmen Stefan James and Fred Rosen finished fourth, fifth, and sixth, respectively.

Earlier in the season, the squad qualified nine team members for the Junior Olympics, an unprecedented accomplishment. After closing the season with a record of 7-2-1, the team captured the second place title at the Intersuburban tournament. Coach Phelan commented on the season: "The performance of this year's team was outstanding, and it will be a tough act to follow. Because of the high caliber of N.T.E.'s athletes, I expect our fencers to meet the challenge."

AS A RESULT of last year's powerful showing, the '78 Varsity football team started the season with great expectations. Rated highly in the Central suburban league, the Indians were pressured to avoid the poor start which plagued last year's team. During interviews, Coach Eugene Cichowski downplayed the potential of the squad, a favorite ploy of winning coaches. However, nothing could hide the strength of New Trier's explosive offense. Led by quarterback Brad Pierce, running back Peter Higgins, and standout guards Odie Remien and Tom Meyers, New Trier's football team plowed its way through the opposition to harvest an early crop of victories.

The Varsity squad started the season on firm footing with a tense, sudden death victory over highly-ranked Loyola. This was followed by a win over Glenbrook North, in which the Spartans suffered one of the worst defeats in their school's history. Confidence ran high, perhaps a little too high, and New Trier's undefeated record was soiled by Highland Park.

THE INDIANS SPRANG back, however, to score a 26-0 victory over Waukegan West, a previously undefeated team.

All hopes of unseating first-place and offensively potent Deerfield and Niles East rested upon the Indians' defense. Led by linebackers Michael Gorman, Michael Goese and defensive end Jim O'Rourke, New Trier defeated both teams, with Deerfield suffering humiliation at their own homecoming. In the battle for the league championship, the Indians gained more victories, defeating New Trier West and Niles North in the onslaught. New Trier East had again advanced into the playoffs. Unfortunately, the first meeting, against Glenbrook South, did not reflect the team's fine playing during the rest of the year. The game resulted in a 35-14 loss for the Indians. Despite this bitter loss, the Indians had lived up to everyone's high expectations.

The performance of the Varsity squad was emulated by the strong Sophomore team. Quarterback Michael Tangney and halfback Michael Clark led the offense, while

New Trier finished first in conference play and fourth in the State meet.

"BACK TO BASICS" paid off for the 1978 Girls' varsity tennis team. The training program implemented by Mary Jo Herzog and Hugh Davis stressed fundamental skills, mobility, and quickness. The team's spectacular 7-0 league record, and their four invitational wins, speak for the success of this training.

Since many girls played both doubles and singles, the coaches could plan a strategic roster which would take advantage of their opponent's weaknesses. A climactic victory over Highland Park's powerful team highlighted their season. In district competition, two doubles teams qualified for the state tournament. Co-captains Betsy Stogin and Alicia Cannon led the team to a fourth place finish, while the doubles tandem of Juliet Naft and Melanie Harris placed third in the tourney. Outstanding individual performances on every level resulted in a championship season.

Depth of field

AN UNDEFEATED SEASON: the goal of every competitor. The field hockey team met the challenge but found that a flawless record created additional pressure in the playoffs. For the second consecutive year New Trier defeated all of their competition in the tough Suburban league, only to suffer abrupt and final defeats in the critical post-season games. The '78 team bettered their previous season by clinching the sectional title in a 4-0 rout of New Trier West and advancing into the quarter finals. A heartbreaking loss to Deerfield demonstrated the ruthlessness of the play-off system.

Varsity players felt that the squad played exceptionally well together and possessed the esprit de corps necessary for a championship team. Indispensable in leading the Indians to their outstanding 14-0 record were high scorer Molly Maloney and her co-captain Helen Badger. In an exciting season, key victories included a 1-0 win over Schaumburg, last year's state champion, and a 2-1 triumph over arch-rival New Trier West. Although the state field hockey crown remained elusive, next year's prospects for a team of top contention appear excellent.

THE POWER OF the mind must not be underestimated. In boys' gymnastics, psyching up is as important as warming up; every gymnast requires inspiration to perform to his full potential. This year, a combination of Zulu war cheers, clapping, and shouts of encouragement propelled the team into action. Coupled with hard practice, high spirits were translated into high scores.

The Indians psyched out their opponents en route to scoring a team total of 135.41, a new school record. Guided by Gerald Denk, named Outstanding coach of the league, New Trier finished first in the division meet and an impressive second in the District match-up. From the ten Indians who qualified for the Sectionals, pommel horse stars Joe Wengler and Bob Creagh advanced to place eleventh and fifteenth in the State meet. New Trier's consistency in every event built an exceptional team whose up-and-coming members foreshadow future success.

Running her routine through her mind for one last time, she receives permission from the judge to proceed. Calmly, she steps forward to perform.

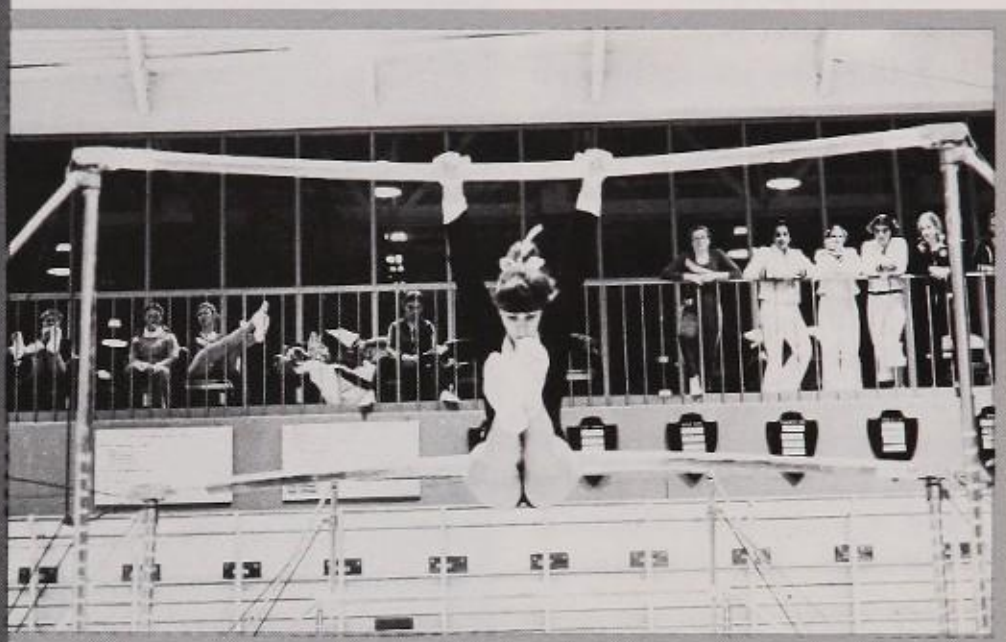

With the strongest girls' gymnastic squad in NTE's history, the Indians tarnished the record of many opposing teams. Coach Darlene Kluka used past experiences to build a unified squad of strong competitors. With Laurie Schadt and Karole Ryno providing points in floor exercise, beam, and vault, the team defeated New Trier West, an accomplishment uncommon to past Indian squads. Cindy and Heather Sipe, both all-around performers, gave NTE added strength in all areas. An admirable team record, a feeling of individual accomplishment, and audience appreciation were the rewards for well-deserving girl gymnasts.

"WINNING SHOULD be the by-product of a perfection-oriented pursuit." As conference and district champs, New Trier proved the validity of the philosophy of professional volleyball star Mary Jo Pepler. By stressing fundamentals in rigorous practices and relentless drills, the squad achieved an unblemished 7-0 league record. Building on a foundation of basic skills, head coach Bonnie Beach has increased the quality of the volleyball program at New Trier.

Exhibiting strength in all facets of play, the Varsity squad showed consistency and aggressiveness; these qualities made them one of the most successful Indian teams in recent years. The outstanding play of Co-captain Laura Held was complemented by the solidity of senior Yvonne Keller and Co-captain Christie Tillman. All-conference players Sally Harrington and Sue Schmitt contributed dramatic blocking and spiking as the Varsity members blended their talents to become a powerful force in the Central suburban league. In early season play, the Indians blitzed their own Summer's end tourney, an innovative tournament conducted without officials.

The Junior varsity concentrated on a building season, experiencing, in the words of Miss Beach, "a searching year." The freshmen comprised one of the strongest frosh squads Miss Beach has ever coached, promising to fill the gap left by the number of graduating players.

THE BOY'S VARSITY swim team has always maintained an excellent reputation in Illinois swimming competition; this year was no exception. The Varsity squad, "the best in the past thirteen years" according to Coach Matz, came through once again to produce a winning season.

The squad's depth was the key to the Indians' achievements. With a strong central core comprised of returning all-American Dave Hartong, diver Joe Nash, butterflyer Jon Sharp, and distance man Steve Ashmore, the Indians proved to be formidable foes in the Central suburban league. The team's strength was reflected in the dedication of its seventy-nine members, thirteen of whom were seniors. Although NTW and Evanston provided stiff competition, the Indians dominated the league.

The JV and Sophomore teams made a promising splash this season and hope to ride into the future on their wave of success.

AFTER AN EXCEPTIONALLY strong year, the loss of several key players often compels a team to start anew, building the skills and teamwork which made its predecessor so successful. This was the problem that faced the 1979 Varsity girls' basketball team. Further hampered by a surprisingly large number of injuries, the squad emerged from a slow start to show steady improvement throughout the season. As the players gained more experience, the team consistently exhibited better ball control and an increased shooting average, highlighting their record with a victory over Niles North and a double-overtime upset of Deerfield. Individual standouts included senior center Tabitha Guhl and high-scoring forward Ann Tracy, as well as junior guard Barb

Fox. On other levels of play, the freshman team compiled a near-perfect 12-1 record under coach John Cadwell, while the Junior varsity posted a final conference record of 10-4. Twelve returning varsity players and a promising group of underclassmen paint a bright picture for the quality of future girls' basketball teams.

AS THE CROWDS come in from the peaceful calm of night, they are confronted with bright lights, echoing shouts, and the cool scent of the indoor arena. Suddenly, they are transported into the world of hockey. The fast-paced, up-front action makes the fans feel as though they are actually part of the game, and they show their appreciation with enthusiastic yells and cheers. After two hours of nonstop action, the crowd leaves almost as exhausted as the players themselves.

Once again, the NTE hockey team maintained a faithful following during their excellent season. Their success was due largely to the leadership of team captains Gary Martin, Mike Hassenauer, Greg Baldwin, and Scott Pfisterer. As a follow-up to their outstanding record of 22-3-1, the team won the Chicago Metro North division title.

EVERYONE RUNS.

The butcher runs, the banker runs, and the happy homemaker runs. However, it takes more than a satin warm-up suit and a pair of Nikes to be on the track team. When bad weather hit Chicagoland this winter and the neighborhood joggers scurried inside, the NTE thinclads kept running.

In addition to braving the elements, the Indians had to use New Trier's antiquated and over-used indoor facilities until spring. Although the stalwart varsity crew lacked the depth necessary to be a viable contender, they possessed several outstanding individuals and a superior distance team. Senior captain Rick Hennessy turned in good performances in the triple jump, while junior Clyde Koffman excelled in the 50-yard dash. The running craze hit freshmen hard, as thirty-five recruits provided the building blocks for the next three years.

A STRONG BASE is the key to successful wrestling. The individual wrestler needs a solid background of fundamental skills and the team must be supported by a firm foundation of quality wrestlers. New head Coach Peter Galea built this base from his Varsity team by installing up-to-date wrestling and conditioning techniques. Comprised mainly of juniors, the Varsity's inexperience was balanced by their energy and enthusiasm. Although the matmen struggled in early season matches, the Indians bounced back with a seven-meet winning streak. The success of the team as a whole was greatly aided by team co-captains Jeff Ransom and Steve Potts, both sectional qualifiers. Seniors Bob Pechtl and Charles Moore both added necessary leadership and individually compiled many victories. A team record of 10-6 proved that sound coaching and hours of intense training were the key to a winning season.

Shooting stars

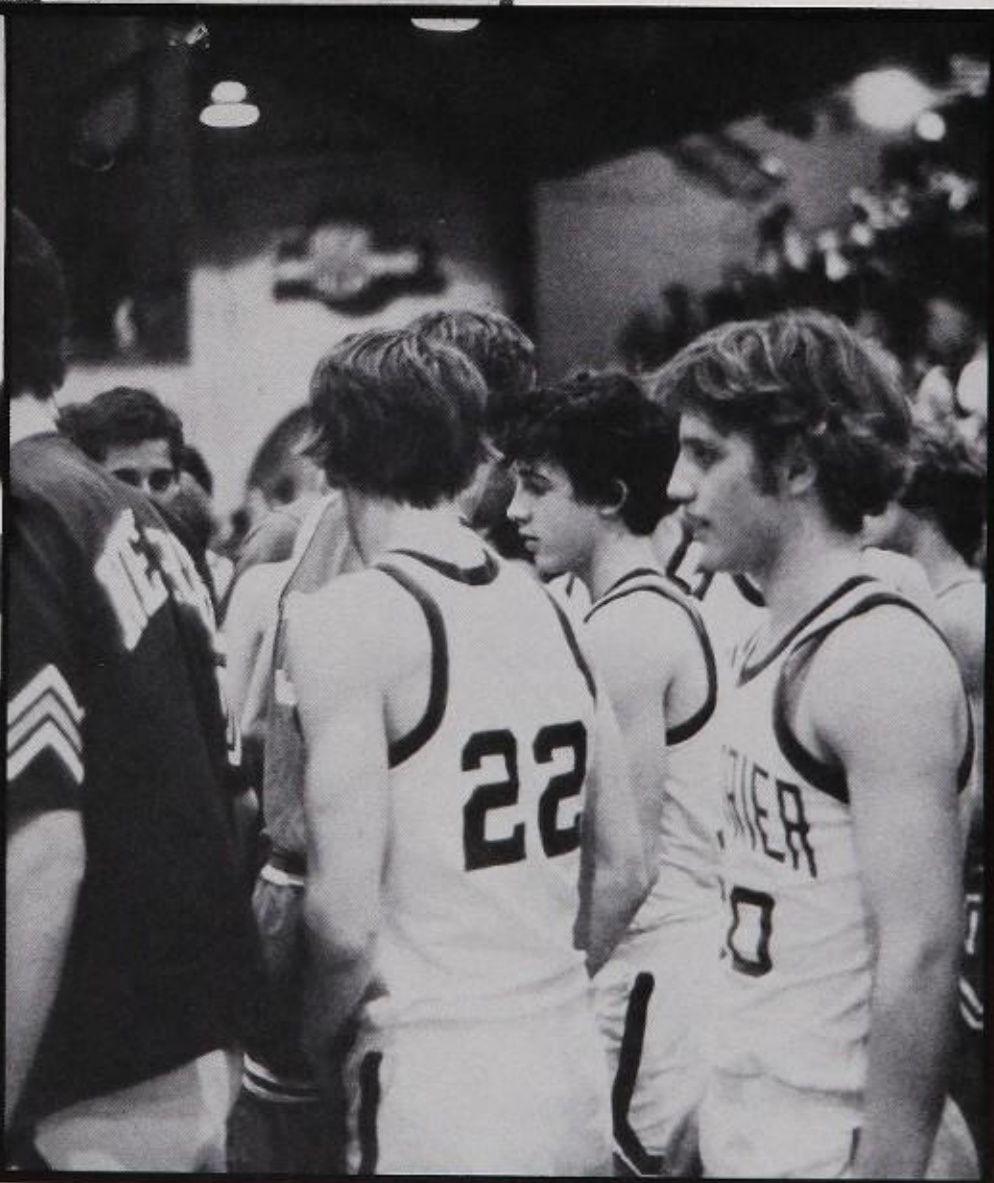

A TRADITIONAL TRIANGLE of rivalry was revived in the Central suburban league with New Trier East, Evanston, and New Trier West fighting for the division title. During league competition, the Indians found themselves on the short leg of the three-sided battle, finishing second behind the deadlocked Cowboys and Wildkits. Because they peaked toward the end of the season, it was the playoff action that put NTE back on equal footing.

Though the rivalry resembled last year's, this season had its marks of distinction. Coach John Schneiter found a new angle with his 3-guard, 2-center offense, made possible by a 10-man base of capable players. Another '79 innovation was the alley-oop pass from floor leader Brad Pierce to 6'6" Tony Lehman. The team also hit 100 twice during the winter, second only to Lehman's slam dunks for winning crowd appeal.

Unlike the last four years, the Indians breezed through Regional competition. After a lopsided victory over Niles East, the tribal five faced Evanston, who had robbed them earlier of both regular season games. Led by senior John Allen, East turned the tide 180 degrees by upsetting the Wildkits to capture the Regional championship. A tough Sectional game against Elk Grove ended the Indian season, a good year by anyone's definition.

A win against arch-rival NTW carried the Indians to the top of the world, but West's revenge brought the team back down to earth. (Photos by Pearlman)

CONSISTENT WITH THE close Varsity standings, the Junior varsity and Sophomore teams split the honors for the top spot in their respective leagues. The highlight of the JV season took place when the century mark was broken in a crucial game against New Trier West. J. B. Rees and leading scorer Brett Bennett carried the team through the ten-game winning streak that earned them a share of first place.

The Sophomore squad, though missing varsity-promoted stars Dave Curtiss and Bob Millikin, had 6'6" John Gynn and 6'3" Ed Harney to lead them to a 17-3 record. With so much up-and-coming talent, Indian fans have good reason to be optimistic about the New Trier basketball program in years to come.

Title wave

THE STARTER'S GUN

cracked and the New Trier East girls' swim team exploded into action. As the Indians gained momentum, they advanced to the State finals, where a first place showing by the 200-yard medley team broke records and started them on their way to victory. Solid performances by Senior swimmers Anne Ward and Laura Lifvendahl, and Sophomore Betsy Lind enabled the squad to swim past competitors and increase their lead. Emerging from the meet triumphant, the team brought home their first state championship.

The swimmers' talents shone from the start of the season as the team continually dominated the Central suburban league. Though defeated by arch rival Hinsdale Central in non-conference meets, the Indians finished on top, unbeaten in all of their official league contests. With standouts like Sophomore Mary Kelly, state title-holder in the 100-yard breaststroke, and strong coaching by Eric Matz, next year's team promises to have the strength needed to defend their title.

Right on track

FROM THE START-ING block, the 1979 Girls' track season took off at full speed. After last year's building season, the runners were set to accelerate past their opponents. A rigorous conditioning program paid off as the girls got the inside edge in races leading up to the state meet. As the team captured the lead, their hustle, desire, and effort won them a high position in the conference. The outstanding performances and enthusiasm of tri-captains Laura Held, Helen Ryan, and Karen Zuke set the pace for the entire team. With three returning state competitors, an energetic crop of new racers, and a versatile coaching staff, the team's line-up was one of the strongest ever. With the odds in their favor, the Girls' track team cashed in at the track both in conference and state competition.

Match game 79

SUMMER USUALLY SIGNIFIES the end of school activities, but for tennis players, these months are a time for vital preparation. Members of the NTE team did not lay down their rackets after finishing fourth in the 1978 championships. They continued to play in out-of-school tournaments priming up for the 1979 season, where they proved to be one of the top state contenders. Neil Golden, competitor in National tennis tournaments, returned to lead seven varsity lettermen. Seniors John DeLong and Peter Horwitch and Junior Scott Lane represented the fine group of Indian players who netted a prestigious rank in the Central suburban league. The underclassmen, coached by Mr. Fly, developed into a highly skilled team as the result of tough intersquad competition.

The loss of a majority of last year's regional championship team left the prospects for this year's squad uncertain. With only four returning lettermen and a tough schedule, 1979 was a year of constant work accompanied by steady growth. Co-captains Dan Geocaris and Barney Schaefer helped to unify the year's campaign; Geocaris's

.991 fielding average and Schaefer's 1.74 ERA contributed to the team's notable progress over summer.

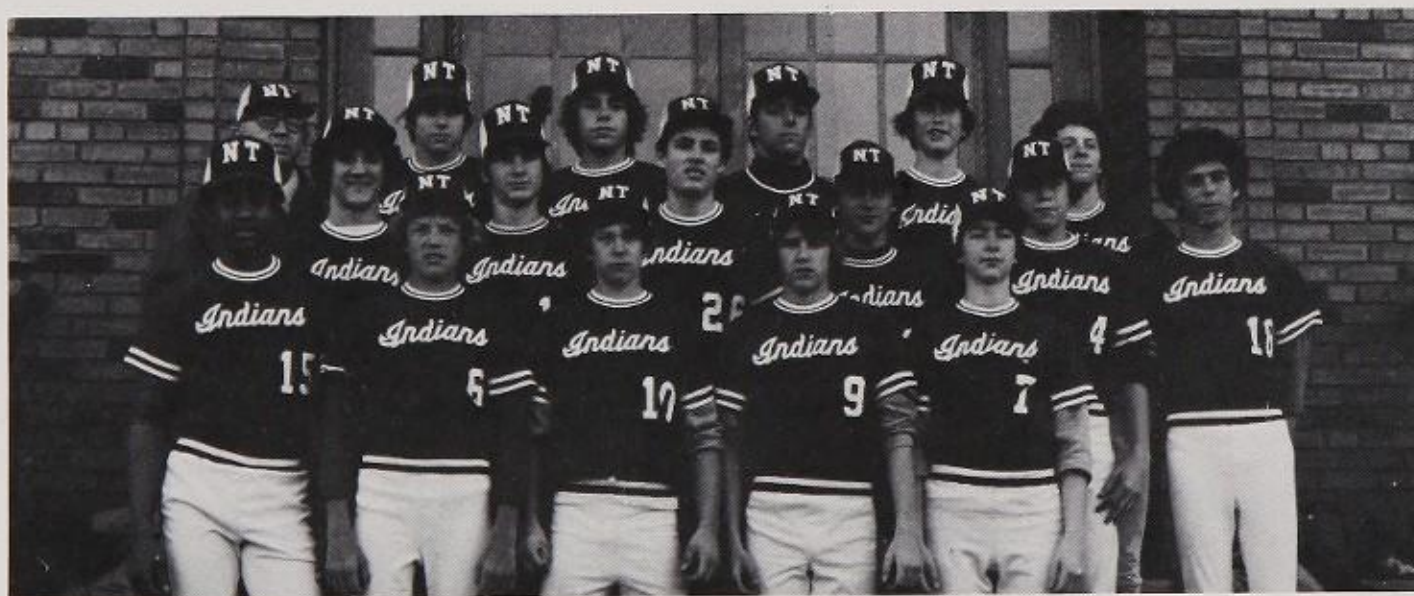

The Varsity's lack of starting experience was offset by the enthusiasm of seniors Bill Eggert, Scott Pfisterer, and Jack McHugh. The consistent pitching of juniors John Marquardt and Dick Dvorak gave Head coach Ron Klein reason to be confident about his untested team. Responsible in part for the squad's substantial improvement was new assistant coach Pete Burnside, a retired professional ball player.

Bye bye birdie

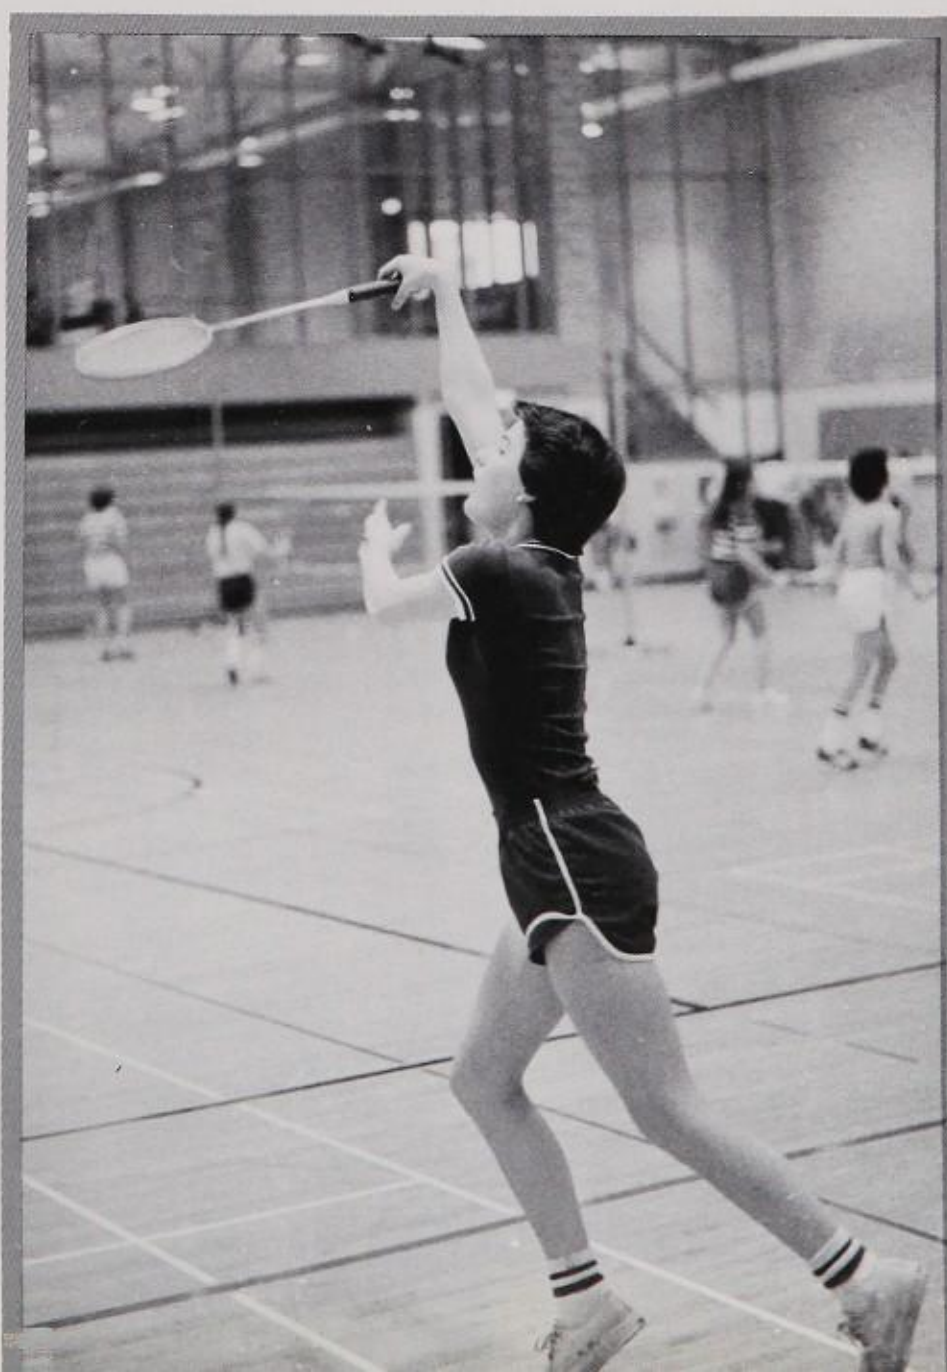

IT TAKES MORE than an agile wrist, swift moving feet, and a keen eye to become a NTE badminton player. It takes work. Although the sport lacks special outfits, shoes, and private lessons, it requires a high level of performance and skill. A competitive badminton game often amazes the spectator who has never seen the sport played with such intensity.

Under a rigid conditioning program, those "backyard badminton players" with sufficient determination progressed into competent players and then adept varsity competitors. Throughout the season, the team's flexible ladder ranking system added extra incentive to aspiring individuals. Co-captain Alicia Cannon capitalized on the excellent training techniques offered as she rose to the number one singles position in her fourth year on the team. To round out the Indian effort, the doubles team of Karen Carruthers and Martha Berlin guaranteed the team a "sure win at every meet" according to Coach Lee Kennike. During the '79 season, the NTE badminton team ranked supreme on the court.

and budget cuts hindered widespread interscholastic participation, the Indians found competition from Oak Park, New Trier West, and LaGrange high schools. Seniors Bill Scoville, Jim O'Rourke, and Bob Nykaza formed the nucleus of the team while juniors Rex Balz, Geoff Hart, and Steve Federico provided back-up power. Under the guidance of Coach McFadzean, the 1979 lacrosse team followed a direct course to stardom.

It looked extremely rocky for the visiting team that day;
They were up against New Trier, with but an inning left to play.
The Indians had taken second place in state the year before,
And it looked as though their lineup would lead the league once more.

Under the coaching of Jack Benson, the Indians set their stance.
The other team looked desperate; they knew they had no chance.
With pitchers like Ann Tracy hurling strikeouts from the mound,
The oppositions batting game could not get off the ground.

The batter took a practice swing and then approached the plate.
First one strike then a second flew, two arrows swift and straight,
And with the third pitch to her, there was not a trace of doubt,
That New Trier had triumphed once again; the pitcher struck her out.

'Those Who Can't'

LAGNIAPPE (lan yap, lañyap), n. something given by way of a compliment or for good measure; something extra. [t. Sp. la ñapa the gift] 1979's all-student production, "Those Who Can't," exemplified this definition of Lagniappe. The audience enjoyed an imaginative and entertaining performance, the 40th annual performance of New Trier's fall musical. From the overture to the finale, the audience was absorbed in the story of a satellite that mass-produces clones for use as public-school teachers. These clones seem human in every respect, except that they have been specially programmed to show no emotion. This lack is designed to transform them into the perfect educators. As the story progresses, the cloning machine malfunctions, resulting in the production of two identical clones, Anne Colby #1 and #2. One of these twins is defective, and specialist Alan Scott is called in to find and eliminate the problem. Instead of capturing this faulty clone, Scott falls in love with her and tries to help her escape from the administrators of the satellite.

Under the leadership of co-chairmen Michelle Maton and Jim Southern, and director Paul Haser, the cast, crew, orchestra, and board members made Lagniappe a great success. This year's production gave its audience "something extra" in the form of enthusiasm and creativity.

IN A DESPERATE struggle for freedom, three escaped convicts have invaded an average suburban home and are holding the family at gunpoint. This year's winter play, "The Desperate Hours," dramatized this situation as it recounted the harrowing seventy-two hour ordeal that took place in modern Indianapolis. The play challenged New Trier's best actors to maintain high physical and emotional intensity through sensitive character analyses.

The set, a complete two-story house, enhanced the realism and complexity of the drama. Up to three separate vignettes occurred simultaneously in the six visible rooms of the family's house. The elaborate set often obstructed the actors' visual cues, further challenging their awareness. Directed by Mr. Robert Boyle and assistant Gina Shropshire, the cast overcame the technical and performing difficulties that confronted them. The various aspects of the play were coordinated into a fine dramatic performance.

STAGE FRIGHT: A disease afflicting actors and actresses the world over. Causes: Bright lights and crowds of people. Symptoms: Queasy stomach, shaky knees, and slurred speech. Cure: There is no actual known cure for this affliction other than experience.

The Freshman and Sophomore classes overcame stage fright to present a pair of memorable productions. They kicked off their season under the watchful eyes of Mr. Edward Steele - Nicholson with their rendition of Liam O'Brien's "The Remarkable Mr. Pennypacker." The play revolved around the character of Mr. Pennypacker, who has two wives and 17 children. The drama focuses on one of the families and the problems that arise when they discover their father's true personality.

The spring production, directed by Mrs. Catherine Pingel - Powell, was Rick Besoyan's "Little Mary Sunshine." The play, a melodrama, was concerned with Little Mary Sunshine's attempts to retain her possession of the Colorado inn. The work spoofs the famous Canadian mounty pictures of old. Both productions displayed the fine underclassmen talent that supplies New Trier's performing arts division.

'The King and I'

SCENE I: AUDITIONS

When The King and I was announced as the 1979 Spring opera, members of Chorus-opera began to prepare their auditions. The night that the two casts were chosen generated enthusiasm and established the high standards of excellence that were to remain throughout the production.

SCENE II: REHEARSALS

The six weeks of rehearsals required unfaltering dedication. Major advances maintained the casts' initial enthusiasm. Moving from the chorus room to the auditorium, putting the royal scenery in place, adding the orchestral accompaniment, the Broadway costumes, and the Siamese make-up, all increased the excitement.

SCENE III: PERFORMANCES

MANCES

The months of preparation and rehearsals came together and resulted in one of the most spectacular productions in New Trier's history. Complemented by Rogers and Hammerstein's most successful score, the play flowed beautifully, from the authenticity of the 19th century port to the magnificence of the king's palace. The 'overwhelmed audiences responded to each performance with a standing ovation. For all involved, the endeavor proved to be an exciting success, an outstanding accomplishment, etcetera, etcetera, etcetera.

Dance day

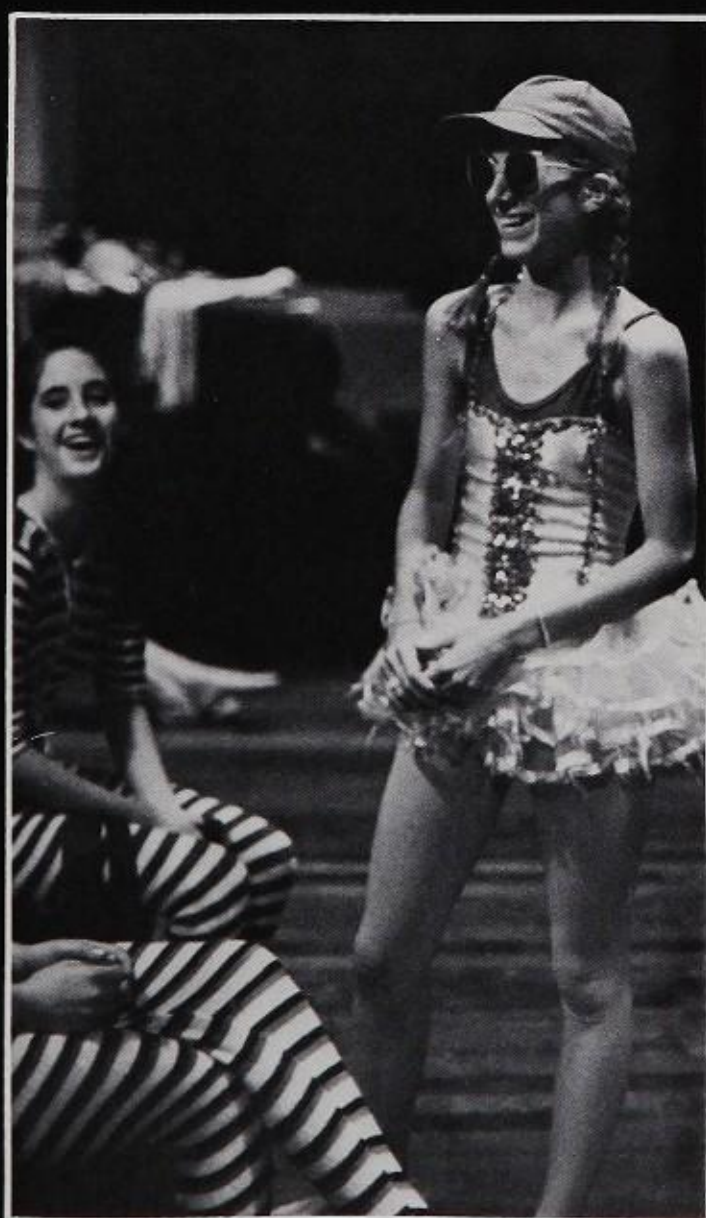

THE ASCENT OF MAN began with a recognition of the importance of self-expression. Dance, one of the oldest forms of artistic expression, evolved from the first experimental gestures of prehistoric man. Retaining primitive elements of movement, dance became refined into established patterns and rhythmical images. Today, dance is a recognized visual art, a creative outlet of energy, and a popular form of entertainment.

Dance lived on at New Trier as students creatively expressed themselves in the informal atmosphere of Dance day. Drawing from infinite possibilities in movement, time, shape, and design, students choreographed dances during three weeks of studio work. From solos to group arrangements, the dancers presented over fifty pieces which included fluid ballet, vibrant jazz, and modern dance. An experience in the vitality and everlasting beauty of dance was the prime goal and accomplishment of Dance day.

WHEN THE GAFFNEY auditorium lights dim, the murmurs of the expectant audience quickly subside. The curtain rises; the now-silent crowd finds itself transported to an entirely different world. This startlingly realistic environment is created by NTE's hard-working but often unseen crews.

Months before a show was produced for the public, the crews began to construct their elaborate sets. Guided by Mr. and Mrs. Gill, they built dramatic settings with painstaking care. This season offered the crews an unusual double challenge. Lagniappe '79 demanded a space-satellite setting, and the winter play, "The Desperate Hours," required construction of a two-story house. In both cases, the highly professional results illustrated the great skill and dedication of this year's crews.

Making the scene

SHH! THE SHOW STARTS in five minutes! Everyone line up with your partner. Remember, let's have straight lines, pointed toes, and smiling faces! Those of you in the shallow end, don't stand on the bottom of the pool! Hurry up! No talking!

This is it, it's show night already. "Just Poolin' Around" hasn't been all fun and games, but it's been worth it. I remember the frustration of determining the various facets of the show's "games" theme, and the confidence of our new sponsor, Dorothy Myers. It was a thrill to use my favorite songs "Domino,"

"Games People Play," and "Pinball Wizard" in my numbers. Those practices after school seemed endless: struggling for pool time, gasping for breath in the 12-man dolphin, enduring weeks of brown bag dinners. With the encouragement of Student director Carrie Goldsmith, we painted scenery, wrote the narration, sold tickets, and arranged the program. All that preparation for two performances.

The butterflies are doing ballet legs in my stomach! The lights are out, the line in front of me is moving! SHOWTIME!

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN! Here is a show that will leave you spell-bound with daring exhibitions of gymnastics, clowns, music, and a cast of thousands. In the center ring . . . Gymagination VIII!

Coached by Miss Darlene Kluka and Mr. Gerry Denk, the 120-member Gymkana organization created an unforgettable show. Mind-boggling flips and flops, fantastic lighting effects, and imaginative musical combinations left each spectator astounded. Capacity audiences viewed such unique acts as "Adagio," an act where the couples balance strength and agility in graceful sequences; "Flying fanatics," in which members of the cast disguise some of the show's most difficult and carefully planned movements as humorous improvisation; and a new member to the Gymagination line-up: "Spanish webs," a challenge to the strength of gymnasts who perform suspended 25 feet above the gym floor. These acts were supplemented by the traditional gymnastic precision that first distinguished Gymagination, and established New Trier's most unique form of entertainment.

NEW TRIER BANDS

scaled formidable heights while voicing the excellence of the Performing arts department. Though handicapped by discordances in the working routine, Honor band rose to the many challenges confronting it and smoothly maintained the quality performances that distinguish the band. Adjustments were made to harmonize conflicting obligations and decreased membership with the initiation of a new conductress. Backed by a superb bassoon section, Miss Phyllis Clendenen blended the melodious tones in a highly polished contemporary repertoire. She confidently scheduled an expanded calendar of high powered performances.

A dynamic brass foundation compelled the Jazz ensemble to outshine past musical achievements. The stirring trombone and trumpet sections produced an impressive New Orleans sound in the syncopated beat. The young saxophones bounded beyond initial expectations to enhance the musical quality. Professional trombonist Phil Wilson's appearance at Jazz night complemented, but did not outclass, the high school ensemble.

The Concert and Jazz lab bands flourished under the direction of Mr. Stanley Ackerman. Perfecting increasingly complex pieces, the groups incorporated striking performances with the cumulative band effort, completing the noteworthy year.

LEAVING CLASS-ROOMS crowded with textbooks, numbers, and pencils, a member of New Trier East's Orchestra encounters a world of music, notes, and instruments as he enters practice rooms and concert halls. Throughout the year, conductor Mr. Stanley Ackerman applied his twenty years of experience to unite some of the best musicians he has ever worked with at New Trier. Through extensive practice, each member of the Orchestra strove to attain the high standards that New Trier expects.

The 1978-79 troupe supported educator's opinions that New Trier East has one of the best high school orchestras in the nation. A total of eight players were accepted into the Youth Orchestra of Greater Chicago, an organization composed of the best musicians in the Chicago area. This year was the first year that three first chair players, Grace Bahng, Libby Bellamy, and Roger Soren, participated in this selective group.

During the course of the year, the Orchestra continued to have a busy schedule. In addition to accompanying such New Trier events as the dance concert, the opera, and the winter and spring festivals, the Orchestra performed in neighboring schools and around the community.

FACULTY

Teacher features

THE NEW TRIER curriculum has traditionally been complemented by one of the finest groups of educators in the nation. This year was no exception. But the 1978-79 staff was confronted with the problem of declining enrollment. It has been estimated that by 1987 there will be 48% fewer students attending school in the New Trier district. The administration has been trying to devise a plan that would allow both New Triers to remain open and that would maintain the number of class options. Due to insufficient funding, the township will be forced to employ between 15 and 19 fewer teachers next year.

New Trier's high level of education has not yet been affected by these obstacles. Teachers continued to help students fulfill their potentials. Aside from the usual academic courses, the school offered many informative and interesting electives. Many courses not only gave students the opportunity to explore different aspects of learning, but also provided career guidance.

With the formation of New Trier Central, several major problems were alleviated. The township was able to provide education for everyone while saving money at the same time. Those students needing special attention could now attend classes at New Trier Central, instead of being sent to a private school at the township's expense. The new facility also helped to centralize the administration and computer system, which were formerly spread throughout the district. This year's staff maintained

New Trier's reputation of academic excellence.

Freshmen

'Twas the first day of school
and all through New Trier,
The students were ready to start the new year.
Cheerleaders were stationed
in hallways with care,
Knowing the freshmen
soon would be there.
When down in the basement
there arose such a clatter,
All sprang from their rooms
to see what was the matter.
And who of all people
befell all their looks?
But a nervous young freshman who'd dropped all his books.
"My pink slips! My gym suit!
The Oddysey!," he cried,
While above him a poster
proclaimed "Pride Inside."
More rapid than ditch slips
his frosh helper came,
Who smiled and calmed him
and called him by name.
With a wink of his eye
and a nod of his head,
He soon told the frosh
he had nothing to dread.
So, up to the fourth floor,
the freshman, he flew,
But missed R&R
by a minute or two.
In study hall he rested,
his feet felt like lead,
While visions of pom-pon girls
bopped in his head.
As his first day progressed
he came out of his shell.
He had made many friends
when he heard the last bell.
So, having reviewed
every class of the day,
He strolled out the door
in a confident way.
He said to his mom
as they drove out of sight:
"I guess I'll survive,
New Trier is all right!"

Though he's dropped mounds of books, a freshman with butter-fingers is nothing to snicker
at. (Padgitt)

With proper safety rules under their belts, Sophomore drivers learn not to clutch at the wheel. (Revord)

Nancy: Are you going to the Sophomore Turnabout?

Joe: No.

Nancy: Will you go with me?

Joe: Well . . . er . . . I guess so. But I've never really gone to anything like that before. I don't have to rent a tux do I?

Nancy: I'm going to be wearing a long dress, but as long as you don't look like a slob that's fine with me.

Joe: I'll probably be able to drive by then — but I'm getting a "D" in theory so I don't know if my parents will let me get my license.

Nancy: Well, if you don't get your license we can walk. I'd rather die than have my parents drive us.

Joe: By the way, are you going to the basketball game on Friday? We're going to wail on West.

Nancy: Oh, I wish I could but I have to babysit.

Joe: I may be starting.

Nancy: Well, I bet I could get out of it.

Joe: On second thought, there's a slight chance I won't start. Well, um . . . did you study for the geometry test?

Nancy: Are you kidding? I was on the phone all night with my friends trying to get up the nerve to ask you to Turnabout!

Joe: Oh well, I'll probably flunk. See you 10th.

Nancy: Yeah, see ya.

Juniors diligently SAT through college boards before AETing on post-high school plans. (Rossi)

WITH THE COMING of September, one fourth of the New Trier student body discovered that they were entering the second half of their high school careers. All too soon, the Juniors realized that the pace of their third year was infinitely faster than that of the previous ones. As activities increased and hours became more valuable, time and energy were carefully rationed to include a heavy workload and a more engaging social schedule. Juniors were preoccupied with weighty textbooks and research papers in the year that is often considered the most academically consequential. Although endless college testing was frustratingly time-consuming, it made life beyond New Trier more of a reality. Junior year was a time of hard work and extreme effort but also a year of productivity and development. When June arrived, the Juniors had completed one more crucial step in their education.

EVALUATION

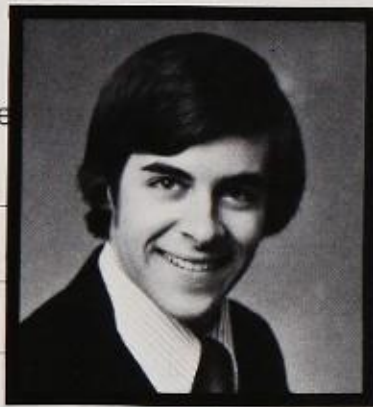

1. What are the first words which come to mind to describe the applicant?

Capable, involved, tense, rowdy, uncertain, anticipating.

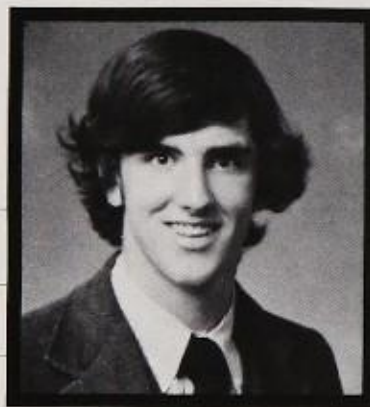

2. Academic Characteristics:

At the beginning of the year, I became obsessed with the problem of getting into college. After I got my letter of acceptance, my study habits fell apart. I realized that I was a victim of a condition known as senior slump. I am confident that I will recover by September.

PERSONAL STATEMENT

It is our aim to get to know you as well as possible through this application. With this in mind, please describe in detail some special interest, experience, or achievement or anything else you would like us to know about you. Essays on a personal, local or national issue that are of particular concern to you are also welcome. Attach extra pages (same size please), if your statement exceeds the limits of this page. Also feel free to submit tapes of musical performance, photographs or examples of art work, samples of writing, or other examples of your creative work.

Senior year is like reaching a plateau high above the clouds after a four year climb. The view is dazzling, but you must force yourself to think clearly. The time has come for the group to separate, and there is only one trail for each individual to follow. For some the path will be clear, others will encounter obstacles. Only one thing is certain: it is impossible to remain here.

Within a dynamic atmosphere

THE STUDENTS CONVERGE and create an active environment. Some limit themselves with unrealistic complaints about the school. But after taking a step back, students view New Trier in an entirely different perspective. With dozens of activities occurring simultaneously, New Trier is alive with energy. Individuals with unique and overlapping interests come together and contribute their ideas to form a special blend of opportunities. Each person helps to coordinate a complex system which makes New Trier a vital encounter.

Autumn walkways were transformed into snowy trenches by record breaking snow accumulation.

The Glencoe theater closed this year to make way for a new condominium complex.

Freshmen realized that computer readouts were the first in a long line of changes from Junior high school.

(Revord)

Prices of New Trier parking stickers soared to twenty-five dollars per semester to cover increased rates charged by the Village of Winnetka.

While adapting to changes

The new student designed and painted mural brightened up the New Trier cafeteria.

Year long road and bridge repairs on Sheridan Road rerouted traffic on the major thoroughfare.

(Sherman)

Due to declining enrollment, New Trier was forced to cut twenty-four teachers. Dr. Bickert also announced fears that the two New Triers might be compelled to merge within the next five years.

(Hardy)

The new magnetic library system effectively cut down on book thefts.

Announcing U-Tel's new and soon to be memorable record album:

"Those Exciting Sounds From The Winter Of 1979!" You get John Coughlin's priceless rendition of, "Only 2-4 Inches Tonight."

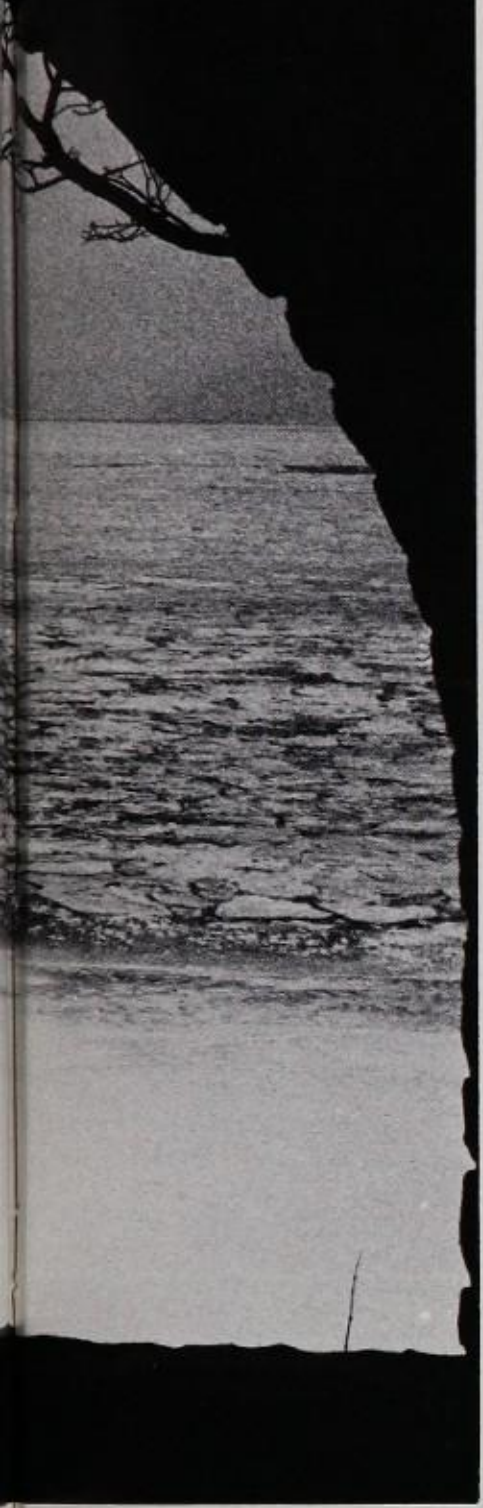

Dr. Bickert's beautiful, "No School Today."

Ken Sain's exciting, "It'll Melt. That Will Be $90,000 Please." And how 'bout the Chicago transit authority's memorable, "Spinning Wheels." You get the Association's, "Windy."

Jake Smith's, "Rooftops Keep Fallin' On My Head." And who could forget Jayne Byrne's "Put On Your Coat, And Get Out And Vote." And Jim Beinlich's, "More Snow, More Dough, No Go." And what set would be complete without Jim Thompson's, "Meet Me In Miami."

And if you act now, you will receive absolutely free of charge a copy of the award winning film, "The Great Sain Robbery." That's right, so get on the phone now and dial toll free (800) BLizzard 4- one too many, and get all this for the low, low price of $6.99 record or $7.99 for the 8-track tape. Call now while supplies last! That's (800) BLizzard 4- one too many. Call Now!

It is impossible for any two people to leave New Trier having experienced the same things. The three thousand individuals interact in millions of different relationships which result in varying attitudes toward the school. In expressing their views, students assess their years at New Trier.

1. What does New Trier mean to you?
 "A lot of intellectual stimulation."
 "Constantly learning about people."
 "Ditch slips, breakfast clubs, P.E. makeups."
 "A huge monster trying to make everyone crazy with worrying about colleges."
 "A quality education for me!"
 "Slavery."
2. How has New Trier changed you?
 "Its helped me grow up."
 "I get up earlier in the morning."
 "Now I hate green and grey."
 "Its helped me appreciate knowledge."
 "I now feel like a mole—I come when it's dark and I leave when it's dark."

the students define themselves

(Revord)

3. What do you like about New Trier?

"The opportunities."

"The Center."

"The teachers—they must be doing something right."

"Snow days."

4. Dislike?

"The heating system."

"The cliques and snobby attitudes."

"Preoccupation with fashion."

"Competition."

5. What keeps you going?

"The good-looking girls."

"Sleep."

"No-Doz."

"Looking forward to something—an early dismissal, an assembly—ANYTHING!"

"Food."

"Learning."

"Some of the gorgeous guys."

"GRADUATION!"

AMID A TORRENT
of film, negatives and proof sheets, the ECHOES '79 photography staff produced the quality work that has always been the standard in past years. A yearbook photographer became a familiar sight at all the school functions, gathering material for both the Senior editors and Junior assistants. The pictures on the following pages were chosen by the photographers themselves as being indicative of the effort and talents of each individual.
